thegriddle
by david millar
December 10, 2006

mazemaker

▫▫ Back in 2001, before I knew PHP, before sudoku was popular, before I was even in high school, before I knew HTML, I found a program called Maze Maker. I barely understood HTML and my website was lame or "n00bish" at best. But I knew one thing: I like mazes.

Cut to 5 years later: I have a pretty decent puzzle website, I'm graduating high school, and I'm about to leave for college. As I'm looking through my old computer for files I need on my laptop, I find Maze Maker and Maze Maker Plus.

Maze Maker and Maze Maker Plus are programs for making mazes. You can draw them, save them, print them, color on them, load them from files, load pictures for backgrounds, add entrances, exits, and treasure, and generally have a lot of fun. These programs are no longer freeware as they used to be, but by registering on the creator's website, you can have access to a lot of different programs; not just Maze Maker and Maze Maker Plus. http://www.greyolltwit.com/