Story Logic - Pies and More
January 6, 2008
One weekend, the local event center had three conventions going on all at once. This was unusual for the small town, population 47, because with hundreds upon hundreds of people to entertain, the town was strained for entertainment. Luckily, three of the town's women had interests relevant to the activities at hand - each was a skilled pie baker and could easily enter pies at the pie judging contest at the culinary convention, each was skilled in a specific dance style for the dancing convention, and each had been featured in the local insurance company's quarterly 3 month calendar from 1984.

To ensure none of the three had their talents overused, each of the ladies was assigned a specific day of the weekend to display their talents. Use the clues below to match up the women with their talents and day - you may place marks in the grid to help you solve the puzzle.

1. Jay is Games chat room member Harukio was particularly enamored with the woman who did the tengo, but her blueberry pie really won him over.
2. Ms. February busted some super hot hip hop moves, but not on Friday.
3. Saturday's featured pie was a delicious cherry pie.
4. Ms. January did not make an apple pie, nor was she there on Friday.
5. The ballroom dancer entertained convention-goers on Saturday.
